

The lost city of Atlantis

Atlantis was an island on which a beautiful and advanced city was built by Poseidon, the God of seas. City that was then destroyed by a catastrophic natural disaster, sent by the Gods themselves, but one of the theories says that it lasted and that it still exists till now, and the government is trying to hide it from us... Some people even dedicate their lives to find the lost city and prove everybody wrong.

Atlantis is a fictional naval empire located in the west of Gibraltar in the Atlantic ocean, that ruled the whole west of the known world. As mentioned... Atlantis was built by Poseidon and he was the leader of the island until his first son Atlas was born, and made him the king and named the island after him as well as the Atlantic ocean. After him the king of Atlantis was Gadeirus, Amperes, Evaemon, Mneseus, Autochthon, Elasippus, Mestor, Azaes and Diaprepes. The Gods made a mighty civilization, but the people eventually became greedy and “morally bankrupt” as the legend says, until the Gods became so angry that they punished the people by sending a terrible night of fire and earthquakes that caused the Atlantis to sink to the deep Atlantic ocean about 11,600 years ago. No one really knows if Atlantis really existed or which legend is the right one, since there are many versions and theories as to what was the right reason the Atlantis sank, or what Gods and kings ruled the city etc....

I chose the lost city of Atlantis because things like lost cities and treasures really fascinates me, and it’s really interesting to see other people's imagination and the way they are able to make the whole world wonder about something they came up with and something that truly never existed... And it’s even more interesting and funny to see people speculate and make theories about some mystery, when there is no evidence that it really happened and was clearly made up by someone.
